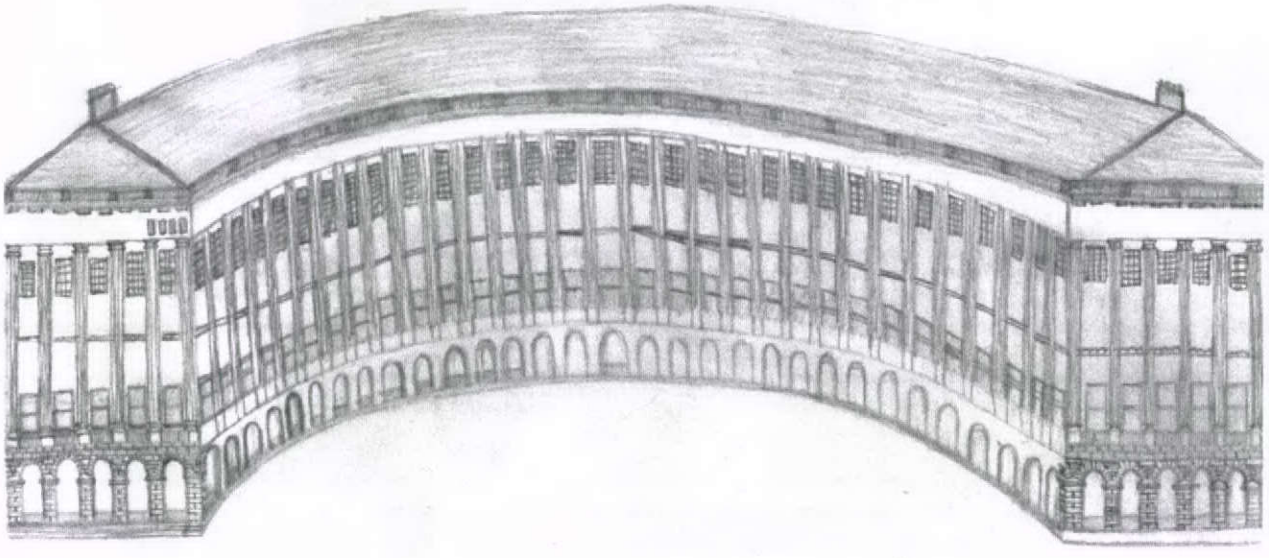
Sam Collins:

"I'm 13 years old and live in Leek, although I was born in Australia and spent my primary school years in Melbourne. I love to draw and I find it rewarding to produce a piece of art that can affect others visually and emotionally as well. I love England for its architecture and history; which brings me to the Crescent. I think it's wonderful that this old building is finally being renovated. It will mean new life for the building and hopefully it will be continue to be used for many more centuries to come".



Martin Olssen:

"I moved to Buxton in 2002, and was immediately struck by the many wonderful buildings this town has amidst the supremely attractive green hills that surrounds it. Having worked with illustration and animation in the past, this inspired me to take part in the Big Draw 2012. The Crescent is the grandest building of them all, and I wanted to respectfully make a satirical remark on the long journey the building has been on to finally reach the dawn of a new era."
