Comments: As a local resident I feel that an external roller shutter installed on a property in the centre of the village, that is designated a conservation area, goes against HBC Conservation policy. Although I do see the point the owner is making in regards to security, I feel that as several buildings also in the conservation area have managed to secure their buildings whilst still being respectful to the surrounding area, there is a better solution than an external roller shutter. An example of this would be the co-op who have chosen internal mesh grills in white or mcColls who have an internal roller shutter in white & Robert Largan's offices which have again an internal shutter in blue the same colour as the building surround. All of the examples above could have been done cheaper with external galvanised roller shutters but the businesses / HBC have chosen to be respectful to the community and area and have chosen the best least intrusive option whilst still protecting their businesses. I feel that once one business is allowed to choose the cost effective & easy option (rather than the option that best suits the area) other businesses will follow.
