Comments: It is good to see that it is proposed to repair the former weighbridge office, being part of a characterful collection of original Gas Works buildings, at the entrance to the site. It would be good to see the original stone setts also retained. It would be good, also, to make sure that recording of any remnants of the original (and later) Gas Works structures is done for the interest and information of future generations; likewise the air-raid shelter (remains of). It is to be hoped that any development of the site is undertaken with greater care than the recent surface clearance work which left services to neighbouring properties broken and dangerously exposed. Note that the owners and tenants of the adjacent Brookside Works have a right of way along the access road, including the full length of the present 'Heras' type fencing. It is assumed that the proposed development includes for the retention of the present, or provision of similar, gateway at the entrance to the site as part of the proposed security arrangements.
