Comments: I write once again to strongly object to the revised proposition for development of the Redcourt site. This is a conservation area in which even minor developments to the existing Victorian buildings are closely monitored due to the importance of maintaining congruity. 24 modern homes clearly aren't in keeping with this.

The destruction of ancient woodland and consequent loss of wildlife would be an abomination at a time when green spaces are fast disappearing, and in times of climate crisis.

24 hour more homes would result in roughly 32 more cars travelling up and down the narrow roads that were designed more than a century ago for pedestrian use. There will be traffic chaos and there will be serious accidents; likely to involve the school children making the twice-daily journey to Whitfield St James or Phillip Howard. The increase in pollution from these vehicles will be responsible for increased rates of asthma, chronic lung disease, heart disease, cancers among the local population. The associated increase in morbidity and mortality is why the wanton introduction of yet more vehicles into an over-congested area should be considered at least as much a risk to population health as the covid pandemic.

I implore you to take the enormous risks of this development seriously and refuse permission again.
