Comments: The campsite

Having bought our property when we managed to escape the city we have been really happy that our house looks out onto a magnificent view; the majesty of moors, the rich varied colours of the landscape all of this unhindered a clear vision of nature. This was our dream home for our later years.

The campsite was operational last year and was not a welcome sight from our house: cars and tents filling my view rather than the glorious countryside. A blight on my senses and seriously affecting the biggest asset that is our house.

The number of campers exploded at the weekends recently with campers ten yards from our fence, people feeling that they couldn't be seen from the campsite went to the bathroom oblivious that their actions were visible from the houses. Although it appears the tents will not be as close as they have been recently, it still is too close for our liking.

We are vehemently against the application.
