Comments: University of Derby have been supported in Buxton for many years by local people, so now it's time they gave the ex student accommodation back to the existing residents of the Peak District who require a home of their own, whether it be temporary or permanent . If the university want to house migrants then they should do so in Derby, where they're likely to integrate with an existing diverse population and access to greater employment opportunities The tourist industry will eventually be the loser if this scheme goes ahead
