Comments: The location of this centre is inappropriate as close to residential areas, schools and shops. The influx of so many economic migrants of which are mainly young men will unbalance the local area. Buxton I believe also relies on its tourism industry and examples are seen throughout the UK where schemes like this have turned off visitors. This could severely affect local business in the Buxton and surrounding area if approved. Although I agree this is a NIMBY stance, surely there are better areas where you can house these economic migrants while their claims are processed? Are there not remote areas where these people can be supervised and supported while being processed
