Comments: Based on the feedback I've come across, it seems that many responses lack originality and appear to be influenced by external factors rather than personal opinions. Some individuals may be intentionally trying to provoke negative thoughts about the proposed development.

As someone who has been a resident of New Mills for a decade and deeply values the beauty of the Peak District, I am personally committed to ensuring that no harm comes to this area. However, I genuinely believe that this particular proposal does not pose a risk of causing lasting damage.

I find it intriguing that opponents of this planning permission have suggested alternative locations nearby within the Peak District. It raises the question of how their objections align with their proposed alternatives.

I've noticed that many people accuse those involved in this project of solely seeking personal gain and engaging in "profiteering." It appears that they may not be fully aware of the challenges farmers have faced in recent years. Could this proposal be an attempt to supplement the farm's income and ensure its long-term viability?

Furthermore, concerns about the suitability of the routes for the necessary vehicles are consistently raised. However, if the Highway Agency has already given their approval to the application, it indicates that the routes are indeed accessible.

Another contentious point is the potential impact on the Green belt. It's crucial to recognize that measures would be in place to minimize disruption during the construction process. Additionally, the project would likely be subject to contractual obligations that address the protection of local wildlife and the surrounding environment. These factors should not be overlooked.

In conclusion, I am in support of this project, and I genuinely hope that if it is intended to provide financial sustainability for the family, they receive the necessary approval, despite the adverse criticisms it has faced.
