Submission: Objection

Comments: I object to these proposals as they attempt to join two separate and very different buildings into one. The result is a mish mash of design. The lodge was presumably the gate lodge to Horwich House, - its position at the gate and the corner windows being clues. The old barn to the north is of a different age, purpose and building style. The only connection between the two is their relative proximity.

Both buildings have their own individual history, which is ignored by these proposals. The lodge in particular is of a style now rarely seen, - ie the gatehouse to a larger property, often square with central chimney and corner windows to see who is approaching. I sincerely hope it remains exactly sit is and not very different to how it was built. I am surprised the lodge has not been listed.
