Hi Hannah

The condition requires the following airborne sound reduction.

- 60 DnT,w+Ctr dB

Part E specifies airborne sound reduction of 43dB for conversions. Part E isn't applicable for sound insulation between most residential/commercial; and we specified the higher standard to ensure the development does not render other (existing) uses unworkable. The developer needs to try and achieve -60dB, if this isn't possible, they need to explain why, and get as close to this figure as is reasonable.

Regards
