Comments: I have lived in Glossop all my life and it makes me so sad to see almost all of our green spaces being destroyed to build senselessly. The over development of Glossop will soon create a much wider problem with the influx of families coming to a town that is already bursting at its seams. The schools, doctors, dentists, and of course the roads can no longer cope with the amount of people here and it is making life here quite miserable. Travelling a mile from Manor Park to Tesco can take anywhere up to 30 minutes due to the volume of cars on the road and the lack of logic that needs to be applied. Such as a reduction in traffic lights and pelican crossings which would be far better suited as mini roundabouts and zebra crossings. The wildlife around Glossop used to be thriving and now I can't remember the last time I felt as though I lived in what we consider to be the countryside. I really hope that someone can see through the dramatic need for housing and make use of old abandoned structures or mills that are in the surrounding areas which would be great to have given a second chance.
