Comments: Nobody could think that putting a massive great grey shipping container outside Joseph Paxton's railway station in the beautiful spa town of Buxton would be, ok??

It's nothing personal, but he doesn't need it there, as he's previously said himself that most of his business is Just Eat orders and not passing/rail trade.

He could run this business from almost anywhere else in Buxton.

It looks ugly and out of place in my opinion, and it could easily be moved somewhere more suitable like an industrial estate for example.

People would perhaps help him better by raising funds to relocate it than to argue to keep it in its current location.
