Comments: I do not object to the fact that the land has historically been used informally for some parking and vehicle turning associated with Lambert House. However, I am concerned that the application overstates the nature and extent of the use. The land should not be certified as a general car park or as supporting intensified commercial/residential traffic. Any certificate should be tightly limited to the actual historic use: informal ancillary parking, deliveries, collections and turning associated with the existing businesses at Lambert House. The evidence should also be assessed carefully as to the precise area used, frequency of use, and whether the use was continuous and lawful across the whole red-line site.
